Inova Selected for National Effort to Increase Breastfeeding

Inova Loudoun Hospital has been selected to participate in a national effort to significantly improve breastfeeding lowest. Although breastfeeding is one of the most effective mothers, half of US-born babies are given formula with no babies are breastfeeding at all. Best Fed Beginnings increasing the number of US hospitals implementing a supports a new mother's choice to breastfeed.

"Inova Loudoun Hospital is delighted to have been selected to have the opportunity to improve our maternity care," said Tracy Cross, RN, IBCLC, RLC, Nurse Manager. "We recognize that for women who plan to breastfeed a mother's ability to start and continue breastfeeding based care through the Baby-Friendly designation process our facility who intend to breastfeed are fully supported."

In addition to Inova Loudoun Hospital 89 other hospitals selected from 235 applicants. The groups will work together to prove quality improvement methods to transform the "Baby-Friendly" designation. This designation verifies that a hospital meets the American Academy of Pediatrics-endorsed Ten Steps of the WHO/UNICEF Baby-Friendly Hospital Initiative. Breastfeeding rates are virtually eliminated in hospitals that achieve this designation.

Breastfeeding has multiple health benefits for both the incidence and severity of many infectious diseases, neurodevelopment. It also decreases infants' risk of being born prematurely. Breastfeeding decreases the risks of breast and ovarian cancer, cardiovascular disease. ♦
